

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Political science is the study of political philosophies, processes, principles, structures of government, and other political institutions. This academic discipline leads toward an understanding of political ideologies, institutions of government, the roles of citizens and political leaders, interest groups and political parties, the electoral process, and contemporary issues that surround our public life. This field also includes an analysis of governments around the world and of international relations.

Program Learning Outcomes

Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs) are statements of the kind of learning a program hopes a student will achieve. The PLOs describe the knowledge, skills, problem-solving, communication and values that apply to all certificates and/or degrees within that program.

Upon completion of this program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate a breadth of knowledge and critical thinking skills as related to political theory, institutional politics and political behavior.
- Analyze political and social issues within a wide variety of assigned formats.

- Recognize the relationships among political actors amongst the different levels of political systems and the political processes for policy development.
